Topic: Current Scenario in Pharma Industry

Summary of Lecture:

Frequently, it is observed that pharmaceutical industry and academia work with different methodology and there will be a lack of training as per the industry requirements. Academic studies and research involves understanding basics of science and its relations with pharmaceuticals. But its real application into pharmaceutical work at industrial level is missing. There is a gap between training done in academic institute vs. expectation of industry.

In this lecture, Dr. Arloph John Vieira has discussed various methods and techniques to the students how to make yourself prepare for the interviews and what are the lacking point which the students have to fill and acted as a gap filler between the academics and industry. Sir has also detailed the various examples for the same. Sir has discussed some case studies which helped the student to correlate their current knowledge with the industrial point of view. This presentation will help the student to prepare better and be ready to become a successful Pharmaceutical scientist.
